* The user-friendly Windows version of Photoshop is Version CS6, and the Mac version is Version CS5. * Adobe Photoshop offers tutorials available from the website at `www.adobe.com`. * There are paid and free tutorials available. * There is a paid version of a Photoshop competitor called Corel Paint Shop Pro X3. * Adobe has many free tutorials on YouTube. ## Creating and Saving an Image In order to make changes to the photo's size, color, and grayscale levels, you must first create an image. In Photoshop, you can make a new image by creating a new layer, or you can use the existing image to create a new copy of it by using the Edit⇒Copy command. To create a new image by using the existing image, double-click the existing photo to bring it into view. Then use the Edit⇒Copy command to create a duplicate (Figure 1-6). Or, you can use the Edit⇒Crop tool to make a new photo's size smaller or larger. FIGURE 1-6 # BASIC EDITING AND RESIZING If the photo is only a few percent too big, simply drag the edges of the photo to resize it. If it's too small, you can use the crop tool to trim it. When you use the Edit⇒Copy command, the new image is selected automatically and you can click inside the image to use the Edit⇒Fill command to deselect the background. To copy an image from the Clipping Mask layer to a new layer, select Layer⇒New Layer. Then, choose Layer⇒Layer from the Layers menu and click the copy icon at the bottom of the Layers palette. You can use the rectangle, elliptical, or freeform tools to crop the photo. To select an area to crop, place the cursor on the left side of the ruler and press the left arrow key. This action enlarges the view, and you can move it around the image by

Q: parseInt with special characters in javascript I am using Javascript to parse a date string to either add days, hours, or minutes to a Date object. I'm having trouble dealing with string characters like ',' '-' and '.'. So for example, on the second line of code, the parseInt() function is looking for the "9", but instead it is looking for "," which is the 9th character in the string. Date.parse('09/

I was trying to figure out what was going on with the Bearcats Friday night, and one of the things I found was this photo, courtesy of the Associated Press. What's the deal with that shadowy figure near the front row of the bleachers? That's not Brittany Stines (center in white) or guard Jennifer Rimmer (seated with the red shirt) as I would have thought. Apparently it is video coordinator Jim Collins, behind the stand for the referees. "He was worried that the guy in the orange shirt would get run over by a cheerleader, or someone might pull him out and jump on him," a source with knowledge of the situation told me. "So he was holding on to him for a little while." And I don't know what is up with that orange shirt, but with the man sitting in the front row of the stands, there is a good chance that he's the player who is one of the few Bearcats with a diving header. "Forget about it, I've been on the other end of that," the source told me. Coincidentally, I had the same thing happen to me when I was a cheerleader in high school. A random fan decided he was going to grab the stationary guard at a pep rally. The kid started walking toward me, and I braced for impact. And we both ended up falling to the floor with the fan on top of me. The refs came to rescue us, but it was still a good reminder that there are always people who are not all that happy with you and your team. My advice for Bearcat fans: Tuck your shirt in, keep your volume down, and enjoy the game. If you can't stand the sight of a Big Red shirt (or a burnt orange shirt), you've got other things to worry about. If you're just here for a reminder of all the good times at Bearcat games, there you go. Comments You share in the USA TODAY community, so please keep your comments smart and civil.
